Asking Kids About Their Day...

Nine out of ten times- you are going to get a one-word response. But asking them questions about their day is building one on one time between you and your child. It is also showing interest in them, their interests and their life. And on the days, you get the great stories from your child- it makes the asking worth it!

The trick- to avoiding the one word response is to ask open ended question. Read this article for great ideas!
